This session convenes clinicians, case managers, and lawyers to explore the vital interplay of their roles in the rehabilitation process once claimants are living back at home. Through discussions and client experiences, we'll delve into how our professions complement and sometimes conflict with one another, ultimately aiming to optimise outcomes for our clients.

Key Themes Include:

Interdisciplinary Rehabilitation: An overview and evidence for its efficacy.

Clinical and Legal Perspectives: Understanding the Rehab Code and its implications.

Medicolegal Funding: For rehabilitation aims, benefits, and challenges.

NHS Provision: Interfaces with privately funded rehabilitation.

Independent Provision: Rising to the challenge of providing interdisciplinary rehab in clients own homes.

Learning Outcomes:

Participants will leave the webinar with increased understanding of:

- A current empirical evidence regarding the impact of neurorehabilitation after hospital discharge on client outcomes.
- The role of neurorehabilitation within the compensation and litigation processes and its implications for financial settlements.
- The current provision for multi/interdisciplinary rehabilitation in both NHS and independent sectors.
- Insights into synergies and tensions among the agendas of clinicians, case managers, lawyers, and their clients and families.

This session delves into the critical issues of mental capacity within the litigation process. This session will explore how therapists can provide valuable insights into mental capacity, while also addressing the complexities that may arise in client-therapist relationships, potentially affecting rehabilitation engagement.

Clients and their families can feel uncertain about how ongoing rehabilitation costs could influence their final settlement. Our panel of experienced clinical, legal, and case management practitioners will discuss how best to obtain a rounded understanding of a client's mental capacity, how to communicate complex legal and financial issues effectively, and how to navigate the strains they can produce. A claimant will also share his personal journey through the capacity determination process.

Key Topics Include:

- Mental capacity assessments: best practices and considerations.
- Variations in priorities among clinicians, funders, clients, and families, including expenditure decisions.
- Overlaps and duplications between clinical and expert assessments.
- Navigating clinical notes and the nuances of information sharing among clinicians, case managers, and lawyers.

Learning Outcomes:

Attendees will gain valuable insights into:

- How observations from treatment teams can inform mental capacity determinations.
- When it is appropriate for treating clinicians to conduct mental capacity assessments.
- The potential impacts of mental capacity assessments on client engagement and progress in rehabilitation.
- Addressing client and family misunderstandings regarding how rehabilitation influences financial settlements.
- The mediating roles of case managers and deputies in the process.
- Best practices for information sharing, including conduits and boundaries between professionals (clinicians, case managers, and lawyers).
- Interactions between clinical assessments conducted by expert witnesses and those performed by treating clinicians.

BOOK THIS SESSION

In this insightful session our panel of clinicians, case managers and lawyers will address the very practical matters of determining and communicating the progress clients make in their rehabilitation.

What goals resonate most with clients and funders? How can we best demonstrate progress and provide accurate prognoses? Our experts will discuss the construction of clinical reports that convey crucial information needed by lawyers, insurers, and the court. Discover how case managers can mediate this process to ensure clarity and collaboration.

Key Topics Include:

- Goal-Setting: Understanding what clients and funders prioritise.
- Outcome Assessment: Exploring the best methods for measuring and communicating progress.
- Effective Reporting: Crafting reports that meet the needs of various audiences.

Learning Outcomes:

Attendees will leave with enhanced insights into:

- The critical relationship between established goals and progress in the litigation process and potential awards.
- The complexities involved in creating client-centred goals and formalising them within the rehabilitation framework.
- The types of outcome assessments that provide the most useful information for litigation compensation purposes, and how to articulate them effectively.
- What constitutes a useful report for case managers and lawyers to facilitate informed decision-making.
- Best practices for fostering appropriate interactions among clinicians, case managers, lawyers, and clients in refining reports.
